Real Property Transactions, Procedures, Transaction Costs and Models].: Zevelosbergen 2008-02-08 Transactions in land and other real property differ between countries throughout Europe. The transaction procedures form normal rules, but they are also normalized through conventions and professional codes of conduct. Various standard textbooks like [Boligi 2009] or the [Real Estate Handbook] have been written on this subject. The Real Estate Handbook” was written by [Real Estate Authors] as a simple sketching of the studied procedures. For those planning or competing transaction procedures or parts thereof, the book supplies a tested approach and methodology. But the book eventually warns of simplification in this field of complex national institutional arrangements.

Nets-Benz 2004 "Beverin shows us in ways which we might open up pre- or over-determined uses of past structures without erasing them-making the poems all the more the potential we can bring our own listening to the poems, and the poems themselves. But they are also a kind of the ghostly presences of the poems that pilage the past for strange and, for an evocative imagination that might impregnate the written." -Christine Hume, Apogee. Processen ved Nets-Benz er: "I stripped Shakespeare’s sonnets bare to the ‘nets’ to make the space of the poems open, porous, possible—a diverter elsewhere. When we write poems, the history of poetry is with us, pre-inscribed in the white of the page; when we read or write poems, we do it with or against this palimpsest.”

Language and Communication in Mental Retardation—Sheldon Rosenberg 2013-05-13 Research on language and communication development and intervention in persons with mental retardation has been conducted at a fast and furious pace during the last two decades. Past attempts to summarize this research have been rather restricted, focusing on a single, narrowly defined substantive domain such as lexical development, or of a single ethnicity such as Down Syndromes. This volume, in contrast, presents a critical, integrative review of research and theory on language development and processing across all domains and a variety of etiologies. In addition, many previous attempts to review portions of this research have failed to consider the research within the context of current theory and data from developmental psycholinguistics and linguistics. A major contribution of this book is the emphasis on relevant work outside of mental retardation for understanding and treating the language and communication problems of persons with mental retardation. Finally, this book is comprehensive and up-to-date across all the areas covered including appropriate introductory material in linguistics and psychology—discussions of the innateness, cognition-first and motherese views of language acquisition. In addition, the authors’ extensive bibliographic is valuable in and of itself to any serious student or professional in the area.

Papers 3 Stephen Bates 2016-06-15 Following Papers and Papers 2, the third volume in the series contains papers written by Jonathan Sergison and Stephen Bates between 2005 and 2014. Illustrated with photographs and drawings, the papers focus on some of the themes that are at the heart of the work of Sergison Bates architects and their approach to architectural practice, such as domesticity, typology and density.

Papers 2—Jonathan Sergison 2007 This book is a collection of illustrated papers by British architects Jonathan Sergison and Stephen Bates written between 2002 and 2007. Writing, like drawing and talking together, supports their collaborative and creative work, providing us with a tangible reference point for communication and in the search for shared objectives. Although each of the papers included in this volume was written by one of the architects, they acknowledge shared authorship of their content and objective. In the preparation of each paper, the observer acts as a friendly critic to the writer, integral to the process and supportive of the exploration of personal and shared experience. Some of these papers were written as a result of self-imposed disciplines; others were prepared as lectures, to support their teaching practice, to highlight a particular theme or encourage a way of looking at something. Others were written as contributions towards symposia, conferences and publications, or in response to invitations to speak publicly about their work. In some cases, a lecture based on notes and images has been subsequently developed for publication. This results in a rich mix in terms of context, length, structure and character. The two papers are organised thematically and chronologically within each section, addressing reflections on their own position within architectural discourse, on the process of making buildings, on some of the ideas that recur in their work and on aspects of place.

The Love of God—Jon D. Levenson 2020-03-31 A compelling interpretation of a foundational concept of Jewish religious life: The love of God is arguably the most essential element in Judaism— but also one of the most confounding. In biblical and rabbinic literature, the obligation to love God appears as a formal commandment. Yet most people today think of love as a feeling and wonder how an emotion can be commanded. Jon Levenson traces the origins of the concept to the ancient institution of covenant, showing how covenantal love is a matter neither of sentiment nor of dry legalism. In origin, the love of God is, indeed, thoroughly relational in nature, inseparable from the deeply personal two-way relationship that finds expression in God’s mysterious love for the people of Israel, who in turn observe God’s laws out of profound gratitude for his acts of deliverance and continuing faithfulness to him in the face of temptations to abandon the relationship.

The Orphan Tsunami of 1700—Brian F. Atwater 2016-04-18 A puzzling tsunami entered Japanese history in January 1700. Samurai, merchants, and villagers wrote of minor flooding and damage. Some noted having felt no earthquakes; they wondered what had set off the waves but had no way of knowing that the tsunami was spawned during an earthquake along the coast of northwestern North America. This orphan tsunami was not linked to its parent earthquake until the mid-twentieth century. Through an extraordinary series of discoveries in both North America and Japan, the Orphan Tsunami of 1700, now in its second edition, tells this scientific detective story through its North American and Japanese clans. The story upends many of today’s prejudices against earthquake and tsunami hazards in the Cascadia region of northwestern North America. The Japanese tsunami of March 2011 called attention to these hazards as a mirror image of the transpacific waves of January 1700. Fleeing Homophobia—Paul Acker 2003-07-18 Each year, thousands of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex (LGBTI) asylum seekers apply for asylum in EU Member States. This book considers the position of LGBT asylum seekers in European asylum law. Developing an encompassing approach to the topic, this book is the first book written in English on asylum law with a focus on LGBTI individuals in relation to asylum law. The book addresses legal and factual issues on the broad topic of criminalization of sexual orientation as well as the large scale violence against trans people in countries of origin by some European states; the requirement to seek State protection against violence when even they originate from countries where sexual orientation or gender identity is criminalized, or where the authorities are homophobic; the particular hurdles faced during credibility assessment on account of persisting stereotypes; and queer families and relation law. The book gives a state of the art overview of law in Europe, both at the level of European legislation and at the level of Member State practice. While being largely focused on Europe, the book also takes into account asylum decisions from Australia, New Zealand, Canada, and the United States and of relevance internationally, offering analysis of issues which are not specific to particular legal systems.

Carman and Worse—Alexander Kiesling 101-01-01 Nothing is so boundless as the sea, nothing so patient. On its broad back it bears, like a good-natured elephant, the tiny mammals which travel its earth; and in its vast cool depths it has place for all mortal woes. It is not true that the sea is limitless; for it has never promised anything: without claim, without obligation, free, pure, and genuine beets the mighty heart, the last sound one in an ailing world. And while the mammoths strain their eyes over it, the sea sinks its old eye. Many understand it scars at all, but never two understand it in the same manner, for the sea has a distinct word for each one that sets itself face to face with it.
